PUBLICATIONS

My research focuses on the ethics of influence. I examine the influence of the food industry on nutrition research and public policy (including obesity policy), and institutional conflicts of interest as an ethical framework. Other research addresses intersections of law, ethics, and policy, especially human rights, professional ethics, and national security; and the ethical and human rights implications of recent scientific developments (especially in neuroscience).

Institutional Integrity and Public Trust in Global Health

Book

“The Perils of Partnership: Industry Influence, Institutional Integrity, and Public Health” (manuscript under review at Oxford University Press). The book addresses the systemic ethical implications of public-private partnerships (PPPs), multi-stakeholder initiatives (MSIs), and other close relationships with industry actors in public health.

EXAMPLES OF MEDIA INTERVIEWS AND COVERAGE

In October 2013, my work on the systemic ethical concerns raised by public-private partnerships was featured in an article in The Times of India (apparently, the world’s most widely-read English-language daily newspaper).

My PHIL 119 Ethical Leadership Course (Fall 2012) was featured in a number of newspaper articles in the New York Times, the LA Times, the Philadelphia Inquirer, and the Chronicle of Higher Education (among others) in October and November 2012. I was also interviewed on NPR about this course for two nationally syndicated programs (Here and Now with Robin Young, WBUR Boston, and The Story, WUNC).

Ron Rosenbaum, The End of Evil, Slate, September 2011 (citing my work on neuroethics).

Co-authored essay “The Ethics of Interrogation—The US Military’s Ongoing Use of Psychiatrists” featured on NPR’s Morning Edition (September 2008).

Research on the law and ethics of neuroimaging and interrogation cited in the New Scientist (February 2007).

Speaker in panels broadcast on C-SPAN including Medical Ethics in an Age of Terrorism (Center for American Progress, August 2005) and Voices of Guantanamo (George Washington University, March 2006).

Co-authored work with M. Gregg Bloche in 2005 cited in two front page articles in the New York Times. Other reports appeared in many publications including the Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, Guardian (Manchester), Times (London), New Yorker, Time Magazine and the Weekly Standard (2005).

Interviewed by BBC Radio, Voice of America, and NPR, among others, about the role of health professionals in interrogation at Abu Ghraib and Guantanamo Bay, and about the force-feeding of detainees at Guantanamo Bay (Feb. 2005 – May 2013).

Columbia Journal of Transnational Law article (on universal jurisdiction) selected by Foreign Policy magazine—in its global survey—as one of five pieces of scholarship worthy of review (July 2004).

Studio guest on the NPR show, People’s Pharmacy, critiquing the regulation of the pharmaceutical industry and direct-to-consumer advertising of prescription drugs in the United States (March 2004).

Interviewed by a number of television and radio stations (affiliated with CBS, Fox, NPR, Clear Channel, etc.) concerning the international law implications of the war in Iraq and the trial of Saddam Hussein (2003).

Articles in The Philadelphia Inquirer and a number of North Carolina papers featured my course on “Terrorism and the Law” (2002).
